

Will She Call 911 on You?

by Marc H. Rudov

Preamble

There was a time when finding the right woman meant achieving true relationship compatibility—in the living room, in the bedroom, in the car, on vacation, on the dance floor, and in your house of worship. If a man was lucky, he also had a long, healthy marriage and raised great kids with such a woman.

Now, because of VAWA (Violence Against Women Act), before divining unity with a woman, a man must first ascertain the likelihood that she'll throw him in jail—on a whim, for spite, for revenge, or for some other fraudulent reason. Why? VAWA enables and encourages women to abuse domestic-violence laws, with impunity. That's why. This article will help every man understand the perils of VAWA and how to protect himself accordingly. Below is a list of prestigious professionals who have endorsed "Will She Call 911 on You?"

Key Endorsements

"Rudov's article is especially ominous, and accurate."

—Dr. Lionel Tiger, Charles Darwin Professor of Anthropology, Rutgers University

"Terrific job, Marc. Should be required reading for all young men who are starting the dating and relationship process. Today's male-female relationship situation stands the concept of innocent-until-proven-guilty on its head."

—Jim Kouri, CPP, Fifth VP, National Association of Chiefs of Police (<http://www.jimkouri.us/>)

"Insightful and very timely advice. As a divorce and domestic-violence attorney, I often advise men to watch out for the warning signs of impending disaster. Getting involved with a professional victim, or someone who has been abused in the past, is a real threat to a man's well-being, not to mention his civil rights and even liberty. If a man is already involved, he needs to get out, fast!"

—Lisa Scott, Esq., founding member, Taking Action Against Bias in the System (www.TABS.org)

"Marc Rudov's insightful, disturbing, and well-written article underscores the need for men to tread very cautiously in relationships with women. The personal and financial risks are too often the equivalent of investing one's life savings in fly-by-night Pink Sheet penny stocks."

—Mark Klein, MD, board-certified psychiatrist (www.EqualCustodyAct.com)

"Good article, Marc. Some of the behavior you describe is compatible with bipolar disorder and other mental conditions related to affective states. I have much sympathy with men now developing relationships with women—especially young women, because today's girls, unlike their mothers and grandmothers, are indoctrinated routinely in early childhood with anti-male propaganda."

—Robert A. Fink, MD, neurosurgeon, founder of California Parents United, Inc. (www.rafink.com)

Will She Call 911 on You?

by Marc H. Rudov

Introduction

There is a dirty, little secret in America—never covered by mainstream newspapers, magazines, or TV and radio networks: Using the sanction and anti-male, unconstitutional force of the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA)—originally enacted in 1994—vindictive women, in increasing numbers, make fraudulent 911 calls to scare and punish their boyfriends and husbands.

If a woman calls 911, claiming fear of a man, the police automatically will: 1) arrive on the scene, 2) believe the woman's version of events, and 3) arrest the accused man. That's OK if the man is guilty of domestic violence (DV). Alas, it also happens when a woman invents violence, premeditates malice, and manipulates a Napoleonic law-enforcement system that, in overreaction to the OJ Simpson case, condones DV fraud against men.

American courts and police forces routinely oblige VAWA's basic premise: Women are innocent victims; men are guilty predators—even though women are equally guilty of committing DV crimes. But, any good street cop knows that arresting a woman for DV will jeopardize his career. Instead, for arresting men, he is rewarded and his department receives increased VAWA funding from the US Department of Justice's Office on Violence Against Women. Congress—led by Senator Joseph Biden (D-DE), the “father of VAWA”—recently reauthorized VAWA of 2005, driving a larger wedge between men's and women's civil rights, and flouting the Constitution's 14th Amendment. Joining Biden's charge to vilify men were Senators Specter (R-PA), Leahy (D-VT), and Hatch (R-UT)—the chief US Senate proponents of VAWA 2005. Thanks, guys.

The resulting fallout is that girls are now learning in school that boys and men are predators, and that calling 911 is the easiest way to punish them. These girls don't learn any situation-assessment or negotiating skills; all they learn is: “woman good, man bad, call 911.” They don't learn about the damage a mistaken, wrongful, or fraudulent 911 phonecall can do to a man's life. Why? Because it's only a man's life; he's disposable. By the time these girls become women, the “911 reflex” is ingrained in them. Victimhood lives!

A Chilling Vignette

Below is a chilling hypothetical vignette that I created and verified with several highly regarded defense attorneys. It is an accurate harbinger of what can happen to you, if you let a vindictive woman into your life—especially, into your home. If this drama doesn't get your attention, nothing will:

Steven is the founder and CEO of a top advertising agency. He lives in a striking chalet on a beautiful beachfront property, for which he sacrificed and worked hard over the years to purchase. For the past year, Steven has been dating Jessica, a successful model. Despite some reservations about her bouts of jealousy and her frequent pressure on him to marry her, he decided to invite her to move in with him. Jessica accepted.

After a month of romantic bliss and relative calm, Jessica's jealous streak resurfaced. Steven has many female friends and colleagues, and Jessica, notwithstanding her amazing beauty, viewed every one of these women as a potential threat. No matter how many times Steven reassured her, Jessica didn't curtail her distrustful behavior. To compound the anxiety, she talked incessantly about marriage. Steven became fed up: he couldn't even think about marriage with a woman so insecure and distrustful.

Steven ultimately realized that rooming with Jessica had been a mistake. So, he told her that their acrimony was affecting his work life and mental health, and asked her to move out. Jessica didn't like Steven's change of heart one bit. She was hell-bent on marrying him, living in his house, ending her stressful modeling career, and availing herself of his wealth and lifestyle amenities. Steven, on the other hand, was adamant in his decision to become a bachelor once again. A heated verbal exchange ensued, during which Jessica began screaming, crying, and—per the VAWA playbook—yelling “abuse” at a level deliberately high enough for the neighbors to hear. In an immature rage, Jessica locked herself in the bedroom to call 911. She told the 911 dispatcher that Steven had threatened her and shoved her against the wall. The police arrived on the scene within minutes.

After some perfunctory questioning, the police cuffed and arrested Steven and took him to jail. He contacted his lawyer, arranged bail, and was released pending an arraignment and probable trial. When Steven emerged from jail, he fully expected to return home and find Jessica gone. Wrong! From a judge in family court, Jessica had secured a restraining order against Steven, who was not allowed back into his own house. Furthermore, the judge gave Jessica the right to live alone in Steven's house for 60 days while she looked for new housing.

At the arraignment, the DA charged Steven with a battery misdemeanor. Now, unless Jessica's wobbly recantation convinces the DA to drop the charges—an unlikely outcome—Steven faces a jury trial. He can't believe how a vindictive woman, with the help of the anti-male, VAWA-dominated court and police force, was able to destroy his life so easily and quickly—with a single, fraudulent 911 call. His version of the incident mattered not, as if his rights existed not.

After a few days, Steven's lawyer got him permission to send a friend to his house to retrieve his car, computer, and some personal effects. But, while Jessica sleeps in his comfortable bed, Steven has to incur the expenses of sleeping in a hotel and eating in restaurants, and is proscribed from accessing his private files and other possessions located throughout his house. Jessica, on the other hand, has free reign of his home, pool, food, liquor, and tennis club. You go, girl.

Epilogue: In this saga, Steven lost his civil rights, good name, clean record, focus on his company, and a wad of money into his lawyer's wallet—all after only one month of cohabitation, in his own house, with a malicious woman. Had Jessica lived with him longer, she would have had even-more power to destroy him!

Don't Play with Matches

If you think Steven's experience is unique, one that couldn't happen to you, you are gravely mistaken. Think of our VAWA-controlled country as a basement with a gas leak. The wrong woman is like a lit match. Take a lit match into that gas-filled room, and what do you get? A massive explosion with unforeseen and irreversible damages. That is why choosing the right woman is paramount—not just for peace in the house but also for your safety.

The majority of women are nice, thoughtful, reasonable people who understand that couples break up and go their separate ways. That's life. But, not all women are nice and thoughtful and reasonable. Worse, these dangerous women, like all women, have more civil rights and legal power than men do. As I've stated before and cannot emphasize enough: your safety is literally at the mercy of the woman you're with.

In The Man's No-Nonsense Guide to Women: How to Succeed in Romance on Planet Earth, I exhort men to reject relationship-zapping double standards. In "Why Men Avoid Commitment," I expose America's odious anti-male media, legislative, judicial, and law-enforcement complex. To complete the puzzle, I shed more light, in this article, on the civil-rights perils haunting all American men—who must understand and actively work to eradicate these perils.

Profiling Your Woman

As you date or contemplate marriage to your woman, or if you are currently espoused but your marital bliss is beyond souring, you must be able to answer the following question: How can you avoid Steven's fate? Only by knowing in advance that your woman is a likely 911 abuser and that you could be her target. Then, run like hell in the opposite direction—before it's too late!

Now, what specific signs indicate that your woman may be a "Jessica"? The answer lies in profiling—the faux bane of the PC crowd. A 911 abuser fits a clear profile: no spine, no self-esteem, no self-respect, no courage, and no sense that women have natural power equal to that of men. Sadly, a 911 abuser was raised to loathe and fear men and to believe that, without the police and the courts—her personal army—she has no power. Beware this kind of woman.

The following table, "Top-10 Signs She'll Abuse 911 to Punish You," helps you profile a likely 911 abuser. Ring any bells? The more of these signs she exhibits, the more you should worry. Worse: VAWA encourages and condones her 911 fraud! Solution: leave her. If you can't leave now, for various reasons, consult a lawyer to begin protecting yourself. Don't tempt fate: a vindictive woman is a serious risk to your civil rights, and the law is NOT on your side.

Top-10 Signs She'll Abuse 911 to Punish You
Copyright © 2005 by Marc H. Rudov. All rights reserved.
#	Sign	Description of Sign	Why You Should Worry
1.	9-1-1 Bully	To get her way or scare you, she threatens to call 911—especially if you don't fulfill her wishes.	When she threatens to call 911, she's halfway to calling. It's only a matter of time.
2.	Caustic Man-Hater	Men cause all evil and inequity in the world, and control every aspect of her life.	She loves VAWA because, finally, she has relief and an army dedicated to defeating men.
3.	Jealous Screamer	Makes a very public scene every time she catches you looking at another woman.	She has deep insecurity, low self-esteem, and retaliatory tendencies. She's dangerous to you.
4.	Abuse Victim	Her parents and/or previous lovers physically abused her. She can't escape the emotions.	Seethes about her past inability or unwillingness to defend herself. To compensate, she will punish you.
5.	Entitled Princess	Although employed, she believes men exist to finance and support her lifestyle.	If you disappoint or fail her, she will retaliate against you with as many forces as she can enlist.
6.	Professional Victim	Cries easily. Every setback is "abuse" and someone else's fault. Everyone is out to get her.	Perfect puppet for the VAWA-funded battered-women's shelters that will teach her how to destroy you.
7.	Litigation-Happy	Can't resolve issues by herself. Relishes using the court system for relief. Malicious divorcee.	She will enlist the court and law-enforcement systems to make you lose everything you own.
8.	Passive/Aggressive	Lets people dominate her and doesn't confront them directly. Retaliates behind their backs.	Vengeful, ticking time bomb that, eventually, will explode in your face.
9.	Permanent Mom	Never worked a day in her life. No concept of the real world. Totally dependent on you.	No experience in the competitive arena. Feels inadequate, powerless, and resentful. Unreasonable.
10.	Astrology Junkie	Spends enormous time drawing astrological charts to understand herself and predict events.	She believes she is not responsible for her behavior, which is dictated by the stars and planets. Irrational.

About the Author

Marc H. Rudov is an investment banker and business consultant residing in Silicon Valley, CA. He is the author of the book The Man's No-Nonsense Guide to Women: How to Succeed in Romance on Planet Earth™ (ISBN 0974501719) and 10 articles:

"Five Myths About Women"

"Romance Lessons from Tsunami Animals"

"The Golden Rule Dictates Your Sex Life"

"Why Men Dread Valentine's Day"

"How Every Man Can Land His Dream Woman"

"Cellular Compatibility & Great Sex"

"Can Men and Women Really Get Along?"

"Why Men Avoid Commitment"

"Did Your Make Your New Year's Revolution?"

"Will She Call 911 on You?"

Rudov's book, articles, and dating service are available at www.NoNonsenseDating.com

Copyright © 2005 by Marc H. Rudov. All rights reserved.